

RESISTANCE and SOLIDARITY

From Concordia to Rutgers - activists fight back against repression!

Activists from Concordia University/Montreal's Karameh Campaign, formed to fight repression against activists for Palestinian human rights after the persecution of organizers of a September 9, 2002 demonstration against Benjamin Netanyahu at Concordia University, speak about resistance to repression while building solidarity with other organizers.

Leila Khaled Mouammar

Leila is a graduate student at Concordia University active with the Karameh campaign and is a member of Solidarity for Palestinian Human Rights (SPHR-Montreal). She has been just one of many people targeted by Administrative persecution at Concordia for forming part of a loose collective of diverse individuals and groups, united by a belief in social justice, who stand in solidarity with the Palestinian people and their resistance to the injustices bred by the Israeli occupation, Zionist apartheid and Anglo-American-Israeli imperialism.

Stefan Christoff

Stefan is a community organizer and artist living in Montreal active with the Karameh campaign. Stefan also is active with the No One is Illegal Campaign of Montreal, CLAC (the Anti-Capitalist Convergence) and works with CKUT Community Radio in Montreal.
