

What is RutgersActivism?

RutgersActivism is a site for convergence, sharing of events, news, articles and more to inform and educate the Rutgers University progressive community about what others are doing – and how they can become involved! It is a website that will feature upcoming events at all campuses of Rutgers, as well as other local happenings, a quick stop to any student or community member who wants to know what is happening in the community and in the area. It is YOUR GUIDE to the progressive community at Rutgers!

Why RutgersActivism?

Rutgers University is large, diverse institution with numerous organizations, individuals and collectives committed to activist work for social justice and community-building. However, many remain unaware of the work of others – leading to multiple excellent events scheduled at the same time as one another while days go by with very little happening, events that are unknown to entire interested communities and organizations, and disorganization and lack of communication between organizers and groups – leading to less effective coalition-building, smaller events and fewer opportunities to make change! By keeping each other – and the broader community- informed and aware of happenings, we can help to build our progressive community and ensure that we work together for the advancement of all.

There are many excellent initiatives that already exist, from New Jersey Indymedia to the New Brunswick Community site. However, many of these initiatives focus primarily on news rather than events, or specifically focus on the New Brunswick campus. RutgersActivism aims to supplement their work with another source of information about upcoming activities at Rutgers University.
